

THOMAS A. DAVIS IS DEAD

Veteran Editor and Leader in City's Civic and Business Life Passed Away Suddenly at His Home in West Second Street Last Evening

Thomas A. Davis died Tuesday night, at 7:50 o'clock, at his residence on West Second street, and while it has been known for some time that he was not enjoying the best of health, it was not thought that his condition was serious, and his death comes as a distinct shock to his many friends and associates.

Thomas A. Davis was born in Maysville, Ky., on the seventeenth day of January, 1840, and his early life was spent here. He attended the schools of this city until the age of 15 years, when he learned the printer's trade in Louisville, and was engaged in business there for two years.

In 1858 he went to Washington, where he was employed on the Congressional Globe, afterward going to Philadelphia, where he had charge of city printing for two years; resigning that position, he moved to Dover, Del., and was placed in charge of the state printing, which position he held for one year.

On the 29th of April, 1861, Mr. Davis enlisted, at Philadelphia, in Company C, Second Pennsylvania Reserve Corps, but owing to his ill health, he was, on August 8, 1861, honorably discharged from active service and accompanied the Army of the Potomac as war correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer until January 26, 1864, when he enlisted with Company L, Twentieth Pennsylvania Cavalry, as a private. He served as a member of this command, riding with honor and distinction under Sherman, to the end of the war and by faithful and conspicuous bravery was successively promoted to Quartermaster-Sergeant and to Adjutant, which rank he held at the time he was mustered out of the service at Clouds Mills, Va., on July 13, 1865.

In 1866 Mr. Davis returned to Maysville and read law with the late Harrison Taylor until 1867, when he engaged in the newspaper business, founding the Maysville Republican, and, in 1892, he founded The Daily Public Ledger. His success as an editor and newspaper manager was assured from the first, and by his fair dealing and the masterful manner in which he discussed every question of interest to the public, he soon established an enviable position for his paper, which he maintained throughout his conspicuous career at its head.

He fought successfully through the columns of The Ledger for free turnpikes in Mason county; aided in building the C. O. railway; was on the building committee that erected the first tobacco warehouse in the East End, and was the original owner of the Maysville Telephone Company's franchise. He always stood at the front when it came to pushing Maysville's interests.

On January 7, 1868, Mr. Davis married Miss Lavina Virginia Martin, and while no children were born to bless this union, his home life was as sweet, as mild and as beautiful as his business and professional career was rugged, forceful and brilliant. Mrs. Davis died three years ago and Mr. Davis never fully recovered from her death.

In January, 1907, Mr. Davis sold The Public Ledger to Mr. A. F. Curran, but retained the control and management of the job printing department until a few years ago, when, owing to his failing health, he disposed of that also to Mr. Curran, and devoted himself entirely to his nieces who, since the death of Mrs. Davis, have been his constant companions, looking after his every want and doing all within their power to fill the great void in later years.

Mr. Davis was a public spirited citizen in every sense of the word and ever took a prominent part in everything for the advancement of Maysville. He was postmaster under President Harrison, and under his administration the first carrier service was inaugurated.

He also served the Federal government as Collector of Internal Revenue, and during his term the efficiency of that office was greatly increased.

He was a charter member of the Washington Fire Company, and was one of its oldest members, being for many years its president. He was chairman of the building committee that built the Washington Opera House.

In 1908 he was appointed State Labor Commissioner by Governor Wilson, which position he filled with credit to himself and the department until he resigned. He was a Thirty-second Degree Mason and a member of the Elks, Redmen, Knights

He is the last member of that band of heroes in honor of whom the soldiers' monument was erected in the Maysville cemetery, and was most energetic in causing it to be erected, giving to that cause every financial aid within his means and never ceasing his untiring efforts until he had realized his heart's desire.

Mr. Davis was a man of infinite compassion, of comprehensive sympathies, of noble and unselfish impulse. He was a partisan without rancor, an antagonist without bitterness, and a friend without reservations or conditions. With a heart where charity abode always, his first thought was ever of his duty toward others, and the Kentucky youth may well study his life in a spirit of reverence and emulation for as long as men admire courage, self-sacrifice, devotion and high sense of duty, so long will the memory of Thomas A. Davis be held in honor and affection.

The funeral services will be held on Friday, the hour to be announced later.

Get Ready for Chautauqua

Thursday, July 1st, marks the beginning of the most eventful week in Maysville this summer, viz: The Opening of the Chautauqua, when it becomes our privilege to listen to some of the most gifted and renowned men and women in the musical, political and literary world of today.

This is an occasion that demands cool and comfortable clothes. In view of that fact, we have provided all kinds of hot weather apparel—Palm Beach, Mohair and Linen Suits; Serge, Duck and Linen Trousers; Straw, Panama and Leghorn Hats; Palm Beach and White Shoes; Athletic Underwear and Outing Shirts.

Come in and get fitted for the Chautauqua. Your inspection of these garments will tell you more in a minute than we could possibly explain in type.

No doubt about this being the best equipped store for hot weather clothes in town.

THE GRADUATES.

The High School graduates are with us again, and are entering upon a life the outcome of which is yet to be seen.

The future is one of promise to them, if they care to make it such, and we have confidence that their ambitions will carry them forward to successful and honorable careers.

We who have passed through the schools and are treading the rougher pathways of life welcome them to our midst. We extend to them cordial greeting, with the sincere wish that success may be theirs in their chosen vocation in life.

But of this we have no fear, for the indomitable will-power of Young America knows no insurmountable obstacles. There is always a way and their way they will find. Their performance in class shows that they have the brains and the will-power to do things, and they will do them.

We are proud of our young graduates, and we wish for them all honor and glory during a long life of prosperity and happiness.

And here's a word of advice to the graduates, extended with the kindest thoughts and with the best intent in the world:

Now that you have passed from the school rooms and have had a little time in which to adjust yourselves and get your bearings, we suggest that you enlist your growing intellect and bubbling enthusiasm in the cause of community pride.

From day to day you may see your elders passing the litter and refuse in the streets and alleys and public places without a thought of its depressing and deterrent influence upon the community.

Let's have a different story from you. Start today and turn over the leaf in the book of life which your elders have forgotten to touch.

Resolve that you will do your part toward maintaining a clean and sanitary city, that the place you call home may be a spot of beauty as well as of thrift and energy.

Constitute yourselves a post-graduate committee in the school of community pride, as past masters in the art of municipal cleanliness, and as boosters and builders for home and home institutions.

Begin today, and tomorrow you will see results, and each successive day will see your city and your people pressing onward and upward in the march of progress through your efforts.

CONUNDRUM.

Can some one supply the word that is the answer to the following conundrum? There is but one word in the English language that will meet all of the conditions expressed in the following verse. Let's see how many can tell what it is and who shall be first in sending it in:

A word there is of plural number,
Foe to ease and tranquil slumber;
Any other word you take,
And add an "s" will plural make;
But if you add an "s" to this,
So strange the metamorphosis,
Plural is plural now no more,
And sweet what bitter was before.

A man of letters once remarked in the presence of Kipling that sugar was the only word in the English language wherein "su" was pronounced as "shu," whereupon Mr. Kipling remarked, "Are you quite sure of that?"

A poor simp who owes us a dollar stopped us the other day and inquired why we are so anxious for a return of prosperity. We told him.

True Heroism.

He had been courting the girl for a long time. It happened on Sunday night after church. They were sitting on the sofa, and she looked with ineffable tenderness into his noble blue eyes.

"Tom," she murmured, "didn't you tell me once you would be willing to do any act of heroism for my sake?"

"Yes, Mary, and I would gladly reiterate that statement now," he replied. "No Roman of old, however brave, was ever fired with a loftier ambition, a braver resolution than I."

"Well, Tom, I want you to do something really heroic for me."

"Speak, darling, what is it?"

"Ask me to be your wife. We've been fooling long enough."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Well Named.

"What's that you call your mule?"

"I call him 'Corporation,'" answered the old negro.

"How did you come to give him such a name?"

"F'm studyin' de animal and readin' de papers, boss. Dat mule gets mo' blame an' abuse dan anythin' else in de township, an' goes ahead havin' on his way jes' de same."—National Monthly.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING
ECONOMY.

Dressing For Efficient Housework.

Enlightened women no longer wear silks and velvets on the streets, low-cut bodies in the morning or elaborate costumes when shopping, and knowledge of the art of dressing properly is spreading.

Dress reform has entered the home and instead of thinking any worn dress is good enough for kitchen work, we have well-planned, comfortable garments for housework—not "wrappers" or the hideous "Mother Hubbard" gown or shapeless kimonos, but neat-fitting, one-piece, trim, attractive dresses made of wash material.

Where did the sensible house dress come from we wonder, sisters of leisure, who designed ball gowns and visiting costumes, hardly suggested the innovation. It seems to me that the cover-all apron used by girls in cooking schools was probably the first step toward sensible house dressing. But no matter whose the idea, it is a great step forward. There is as much pleasure in being becomingly and appropriately dressed for housework as in being correctly attired for the street, if you are mentally well balanced. If you do not feel the pleasant consciousness of comfort in suitable house clothing you need culture in certain directions.

The long lines of the new house dresses allow them to be well fitting, easily made and laundered. The increased self-respect one feels from knowing they are gowned in fabric that is absolutely sanitary and clean from thorough washing when soiled is stimulating.

No material is suitable for kitchen or house work that will catch and hold dust or that can not be washed and boiled. Ashes, dust, grease, lint and dirt cling, and no brushing or mere airing can make them truly clean. Gingham, linen, percale, seersucker and calico in medium light colors are the only proper materials for housework dresses.

The accessories of the dresses are as important as those of dinner gowns. They are rubber heeled comfortable slippers or shoes, loose rubber gloves for rough hands, calloused palms and broken finger nails are impossible to keep clean, and last but most important, a pretty but simply made cap that will cover and protect the hair and keep it from flying unbecomingly about the face.

A true woman is always womanly under all circumstances, so perhaps it is the difficulty of securing housemaids that has brought this useful dress reform about. American women are noted for adapting themselves to all circumstances, and this happy, sensible style of suitable dressing in the home is one we are devoutly thankful for.

ITALY MAY FACE A MEAT FAMINE SOON.

New York, June 21.—"Italy will soon be facing a meat famine," declared William Wallace, a representative of Swift & Company, who returned from that country on the steamer Duca D'Aosta today. He said that Italy wanted to purchase supplies to be delivered before payment, a plan which no packer would entertain. He also said that the Italian government was buying up all the native cattle in the country.

GUARDING MEAT FROM HEAT

A Few Simple Precautions For the Housewife Who Does Not Want Her Supplies To Spoil.

Washington, D. C.—A few simple precautions will aid the housewife in keeping meat untainted in hot weather. It is, of course, common knowledge that the higher the temperature the quicker the meat will spoil, but the family's supplies are not absolutely at the mercy of the thermometer. Ice and cleanliness are two great weapons of defense.

For many families a refrigerator is obviously out of the question, but it is perhaps better to have no refrigerator at all than a neglected one. Merely to wash it out occasionally does little good; it should be thoroughly scalded at frequent intervals, in particular the drain. This, if overlooked, is apt to harbor fungous growths, which may spread to the food. On one occasion a man applied to the Department of Agriculture because he had found that a joint of beef placed in his refrigerator had turned a peculiar bright red. Upon examination it was ascertained that the meat was covered with a peculiar fungous growth due entirely to the condition of the refrigerator. Growths of this kind do not always advertise themselves so prominently and there may be much evil in an ice box that the eye can not detect.

If the refrigerator drain is not thoroughly cleaned, moreover, it is likely to become clogged, the water is not carried off quickly enough and little pools are left standing in the interior. Dampness is one of the conditions most favorable to bacterial growth. An ice box in this state will not protect food long. It is, in fact, a wise precaution to wipe the interior of a refrigerator every day with a dry cloth.

The temperature of the average refrigerator is higher than most persons suppose, and in those households where a regular supply of ice is not obtainable, a cool cellar, a spring house or the depths of a well may serve somewhat the same purpose. On farms where there is an ice house, the meat may be placed in some form of closed retainer and buried in the ice. In any event, the meat must be carefully screened from flies. The danger from infection from these pests has been pointed out many times, but familiarity breeds contempt and they still persist. The fly not only does the meat itself no good but it may readily deposit upon it some infection, which is carried in turn by the meat into the human system. Some flies will deposit their eggs on the meat and these in a short time will become maggots and the meat is "fly-blown."

Much sickness that is popularly ascribed to ptomaine poisoning or to bad food in general is really caused in some such way as this, the food, in itself perfectly wholesome, acting merely as a mechanical carrier for the "germs" which cause the trouble. Some of these sorts come from the human intestine and their presence is a sure indication that filth is present, even if the amount is too small to be seen. Filth of this kind may be carried by dust, but it more often comes from soiled hands. One might wish that every kitchen could have the sign found in some well-managed food factories—"When you leave the room for any purpose, wash your hands before you return to work."

"Germs" which grow in foods and cause illness grow very rapidly, particularly if the food is a little warm, and are not destroyed unless the food is well cooked before serving. Simply "warming up" is not enough, as was found in a case of illness recently reported after eating some warmed up creamed vegetables. Certain kinds of food—cream, chicken, or custard, or warm vegetables, for example—are excellent culture mediums for bacteria which may have been introduced into them by accident. For this reason it is a safe rule to have as short a time as possible intervene between the preparation of food and its consumption. Broth is another excellent medium and in consequence should be drained off if it is intended to keep the meat for any length of time before serving. If the broth is used also, it should be boiled before serving. All food, cooked or uncooked, should be kept in a clean, cool place in order to reduce the danger of infection to a minimum.

When meat must for any reason be kept for unusually long periods of time or when the conditions are unusually unfavorable, sealing may be resorted to advantage. Dropping the meat into boiling water for a few minutes will not seriously affect its flavor when it ultimately appears upon the table, and it will put it in a much better condition for keeping. It is important, however, that it be dipped in a large body of boiling water. If only a small amount of water is used, the introduction of the meat will lower the temperature to such an extent that the whole process becomes worthless. With such meats as veal or pork, which are always—ought to be—thoroughly done, the precaution can be carried further and the joints partially cooked before being stored away. Care should be taken, however, to see that the re-cooking is thoroughly done.

Hot weather also calls for additional precautions on the part of the housewife in regard to canned products. Once these have been opened and exposed to the air, they spoil as quickly—if not more quickly—than fresh food. The contents of a can should therefore be disposed of without delay. In no event should they be left in the can after it has been opened, but should be used at once unless the housekeeper wishes to "air" the canned material, which some believe is desirable. If this is done, the can contents should be transferred to a clean earthen or glass dish and put away for an hour or two in a cool place where dust will not reach it.

DOOR WEDGE RINGS A BELL

Placing a wedge under a door is one of the most effectual means of closing it, for pushing upon the door from the outside only increases the effect of the wedge. A convenient device of this kind is made of metal, says the Scientific American, and it not only serves to wedge the door, but also contains a mechanical bell mounted on the same base and behind the wedge in such a way that pressure on the face of the wedge causes the bell to ring. The base carries a set of short points underneath, so that it can be put in place and grips upon the carpet or flooring so as not to slide out of position. Such a device can be carried in the pocket and it is to be recommended for traveling.

A GOOD THING

When It Comes Along Don't Let It Get Away From You.

"I really feel that it is hardly possible to say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts as a health food," writes a Chicago lady.

"For 9 or 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and chronic constipation, caused by the continued use of coffee and rich, heavy foods. My ailments made my life so wretched that I was eager to try anything that held out a promise of help. And that is how I happened to buy a package of Grape-Nuts last spring.

"That ended my experiments. For in Grape-Nuts I found exactly what I wanted and needed. From the day I began to use it I noticed an improvement and in a very few weeks I found my health was being restored.

"My digestive apparatus now works perfectly and chronic constipation has been entirely relieved. I have gained in weight materially, and life is a very pleasant thing to me so long as I use Grape-Nuts once or twice a day. I have found by experiment that if I leave it off for a few days my health suffers.

"A physician in our town has great success in treating stomach troubles, and the secret of it is that he puts his patients on Grape-Nuts food—it always brings back the power of digestion."

Correspondence

Berea, Ky., June 21.—Memorial Day exercises May 29 were the most impressive I ever attended. The chapel exercises began at 9 a. m., conducted by the faculty and students of the college. At 10:30 a march to cemetery headed by a brass band where exercises were conducted by Captain James West Post, G. A. R., assisted by W. R. C. Lunch was served at 12:30 in the Y. M. C. A. booth.

The afternoon was devoted to patriotic and historical addresses by the faculty, beginning with President Frost. The most interesting, because of its local setting, was the address of Dr. Robertson on "The Civil War in Madison County." He graphically described the battle of Big Hill and its culmination at Richmond, with the utter defeat of the Federals. He described General Nelson's run from Lexington that in a way resembled "Sheridan's ride," and how enraged he became as he met his demoralized soldiers, how he raced through the cemetery, roaring like a lion and hatless, trying in vain to reorganize his scattered forces. Dr. Robertson paid a high tribute to the generalship of Kirby Smith, saying that "had General Bragg held up his line of work as did Kirby Smith, Kentucky's history in the Civil War might have been differently written."

Commencement exercises of the college began Monday evening, May 29, when the Phi Delta Literary Society, the oldest and most distinguished of the several societies here, gave a "Progressive Symposium" at the booth. The booth was decorated on all sides and overhead with branches of trees and vines until it resembled a wooded grove. Bird cages hidden in the branches over head and their occupants chirping and singing to each other, with the subdued light added enchantment to the scene. The younger members of the society, clad in white, devoted the first hour to passing delicious refreshments to the several hundred invited guests, while a hidden orchestra rendered delightful music.

Mr. C. G. Degman, of Mason county, made the opening address on "Awards of Industry." After illustrating such "awards" he reached up among the branches and pulled a cord where the lights went out and a beautiful banner with electric illumination dropped into view. The illumination brought out in gold letters the awards of the society during the year.

Other members of the society, including T. C. Try, B. P. and C. Harrison, of Lewis county, gave interesting short talks on live subjects of the day.

The graduation exercises of the different departments of the college have been unusually interesting in that historic plays have been substituted for addresses and essays, although these have not been lacking.

To many the most interesting were the Academy Department, where the young lady graduates had given their "themes" that were scholarly and interesting. The young men of the class gave two scenes from "The Constitutional Convention, Independence Hall, Philadelphia, 1781." They were dressed as Colonial gentlemen in knee-breeches, swallow-tailed coats and wearing powdered wigs. They engaged in heated arguments over the issue at hand so naturally that one might well believe our clock had turned backward more than a century.

Baccalaureate exercises on Sunday were, as usual, good. President Frost's sermon, "Transmission of Ideals," was up to all suggestions of the subject. At the close of the sermon he read a letter from President Wilson, sympathizing with and congratulating him on the year's work.

Then Hon. John D. Schuff, postmaster of Cincinnati, gave an address, expressing his appreciation of the high order of work being done and encouraging the students and especially the large number of graduates to live up to these "ideals."

The closing exercises of the Harmonia Society on Monday was a cantata, "Heroes of '76." The staging in the tabernacle was so real that one seemed to be seeing and hearing sure-enough battles.

The forenoon of Tuesday was occupied by the Training School at Arden Grove, where a "Pageant of Peace" was beautifully and effectively carried out by the children. The afternoon was given over to the Foundation School, when the "Daniel Boone Pageant" was enacted on the athletic field. The adventures of Boone and his followers were portrayed from the first coming to Kentucky to the founding of Boonesboro, including the repeated attacks by the Indians. The athletic field, with its natural setting, part of which is forest where the Indian village was located, was especially suited for this most interesting pageant.

Wednesday, Commencement Day, was the crowning day, with its diversified attractions and the tremendous crowd. A cannon fired at the end of each hour, denoting change of program. The exercises closed at 4:30 p. m., with the singing by Harmonia of the "Hallelujah Chorus" from "Messiah," which seemed a fitting close to ten days of intensely interesting exercises.

GREAT PEACE TREATIES

Treaty of Ryswick, Ending the "Grand Alliance" War.

A wrinkled little man, who wore high heels to eke out his height and a large wig to add dignity to his hook-nosed face, once declared "the State is I!" and he set out to prove it.

He was Louis XIV, King of France, known to history as "the Grand Monarch;" and at once one of the greatest and one of the prettiest men in all French history. He had had the wit to surround himself with men far greater than he; so that the first half of his reign was France's golden age. Literature, art, music and statesmanship flourished at his court. His generals won him thousands of miles of new territory. All Europe trembled under his lash, as later under Napoleon's.

But as time went on, he found himself in the position of many another celebrity who has lived for self and not for mankind. The men who had made his reign glorious were dying off. The wicked and beautiful women who had adorned his court were either dead or were now only wrinkled and old.

Then it was that Europe combined against him.

William III, King of England, made war on France, as a check to Louis' boundless ambition, and Spain, Germany, Holland and several lesser powers promptly allied themselves with England.

Thus, in 1689, began the bloody "War of the Grand Alliance," France alone against nearly all the rest of the civilized world.

For eight years the war continued. It raged from one end of Europe to the other. It crossed into America. It was fought on many seas. Half the continent was swept by it.

Oddly enough, France won almost every battle; yet, yearly, France grew weaker while the allies waxed stronger. Peace overtures were made in 1696. But the King of England angrily rejected them, saying:

"We will make a treaty only with swords in our hands!"

"Yet the next year the King of Sweden interceded so effectively for peace that both sides agreed to a conference. The French delegates made headquarters at The Hague. The allies' commissioners were quartered at Delft. And the conference itself was held at the Netherlands town of Ryswick.

Months of futile dispute and argument followed, leading nowhere. At last, it was agreed to leave the whole affair in the hands of one English and one French commissioner. These two men quickly came to an understanding and the Treaty of Ryswick was drawn up and ratified. Each of the allies had demanded a share in the spoils, while France, still unbeaten, snarled over every concession she was forced to make.

By the final terms, the treaty demanded that Louis acknowledge William III as lawful King of England and cease giving aid to William's fallen rival, James II.

That France give back to Spain all the fallen territory snatched from her by the French armies of late years, cede to Germany the Dutchy of Lorraine and certain Rhine cities, and give back several captured Netherlands fortresses to Holland.

In return, France was merely allowed to keep Strasbourg and some other districts of Alsace, which Louis had seized in 1681, and was given a clear title to Nova Scotia and Pondicherry.

Briefly, France lost nearly everything she had won during the past twenty years of continuous warfare. It was a mortal blow to Louis' pride. He had, for the best part of a half century, been the bully of Europe. And now the fruits of his bullying and of better men's genius were wrested from him. His adviser, Vauban, cried in rage, on hearing of the Ryswick treaty:

"We have always beaten the enemy in this war. Yet we have made a peace that dishonors our king and our nation."

SEALED PROPOSALS

Sealed bids will be received by the Mayor and Board of Council of the City of Maysville, Ky., until 8 o'clock, p. m., Monday, July 5, 1915, at the Council Chamber, for the construction of an 18-inch sewer and appurtenances, in East Second street from Lexington street to Poplar street, and in Poplar street from Second street to the Ohio river; together with the construction of manholes and lamp-holes along the 12-inch sewer from Lexington street to Houston street, and the disconnecting of certain catch-basins from the present 12-inch line. A certified check in the sum of $50, payable to the City Treasurer, must accompany each bid. Bids must be made on blank form which will be furnished by the city. Specifications and plans and estimate of quantities can be seen at the City Clerk's office. The Council reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich. — "I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache and got so weak that I could hardly do my work. When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and when I would sweep the floor I would get so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my dusting I would have to lie down. I got so poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It said 'Saved from the Grave,' and told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, 'Why don't you try it?' So I did, and after I had taken two bottles I felt better and I said to my husband, 'I don't need any more,' and he said 'You had better take it a little longer anyway.' So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. ALONZO E. BAKER, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.
In these words is hidden the tragedy of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meagre wages. Whether in house, office, factory, shop, store or kitchen, woman should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are prone, and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

TOO BAD, BOB, TOO BAD.

While surveying near the boundary between Wisconsin and Illinois, Bob Caldwell was unable to find fifteen of the miniature monuments, each of which weigh several hundred pounds, which designated the boundary line. After a diligent search he found all of them neatly piled in a garden near by. The residents had found the stones a nuisance while digging their gardens.

COMMUNICATION RECEIVED EXPLAINING QUARANTINE SITUATION.

County Judge Rice has received the following telegram from Paul Fischer, Ohio State Veterinarian, of Columbus, O., concerning the state and national quarantine situation as it deals with Kentucky and Ohio. The telegrams are as follows:

Maysville, Ky., June 21, 1915.
Hon. Paul Fischer, State Veterinarian, Columbus, O.:

Is there any quarantine measure against stock from Kentucky in Ohio?

Answer. W. H. RICE.

Judge Mason County Court, Columbus, O., June 21, 1915.

W. H. Rice, Maysville, Ky.: Livestock from free or federal restricted areas may be shipped to points in Ohio where municipal or federal inspection is maintained. Livestock other than for immediate slaughter and pure bred may be shipped only under permit issued by this office when from free or restricted areas. PAUL FISCHER, State Veterinarian.

The interior of the Five and Ten Cent Store is being decorated by a new coat of paint and repapered. It will present a handsome appearance.

Unprecedented Demand

Over 12,000 Overlands have been sold since the new price of $750 was announced three weeks ago and the factory is over 17,000 cars behind their orders. Automobile mechanics, and even competitors, conceded it to be the greatest value ever known. Already we have sold one-half of our allotment for June and July. If you are going to buy an automobile, no matter how much money you would invest, you will do yourself a positive injustice if you do not look at and get a demonstration of the Overland. No other car selling under $1,000 has the size, power, conveniences and appearance of the new $750 Overland. Let us give you a demonstration and be convinced. "Overlands first because Overlands last."
